HOME AND GOSSIP.

- Keeps fine.
- Go to the lecture to-night.
- D. B. Macdonald of Wolsley, has been vaccinated.
- Mr. Ogilvie has placed a grain buyer at Wolsley.
- Quadrille party to-night at the emigrant building.
- The contract has been let for the erection of the curling rink.
- A number of our citizens have secured large contracts for cordwood for the new mill.
- More houses are wanted to rent. Some of our enterprising citizens should build a terrace.
- Mr. W. Gibson has moved to his homestead. Mr. Searf, of Edgeley, will occupy his house for the winter.
- Messrs. Rufus Stevenson and Frank I. Clarke, of Winnipeg, passed through here on a western tour yesterday morning. Rufus looks as hale as ever.
- We have received an advertisement for the Nor-West Farmer, an excellent farmer's monthly published at Winnipeg. It will appear in our next issue.
- Mr. Thompson, of the firm of Thompson & Nelson, is in Winnipeg forwarding lumber to supply the unexpected demand at this season of the year.
- B. Battery is now in comfortable quarters they are occupying the whole of the immigrant buildings, and are arranging for Mr. Baker's two offices, which we understand has been granted.
- St. Chad's church, tp. 17, r. 13, southeast of here, will be dedicated on Sunday next at 2.30 o'clock, p.m. by the Lord Bishop of Qu'Appelle. It is a very neat little edifice, and the cost of its erection has all been provided for, chiefly by the settlers in the neighborhood, so that it will be opened free of debt.
- The case of Harvey vs. Fraiser was on where the defendant was charged with starting a fire on the prairie without sufficient help to control it. G. S. Davidson and A. M. McLean, Esqs., after hearing the evidence found the defendant guilty; but as the circumstances were of such a nature that the defendant, although breaking the law with no wrong intent whatever, he was only fined $1.00 and costs.
- Mr. Wm. Brittlebank, well known here, writes from Colorado to Mr. S. H. Casswell, our urban postmaster, as follows: "Unhealthy country this; I have had four colds since coming south of the line. Everything now is terribly dull. Things when at their worst in the Northwest are brisk as compared with the same here. There is also more enterprise on our Canadian prairies." Score another one for our Northwest. And yet the country across the line is blest with the skies.
- Mr. Nicholas Flood Davin, of the Regina Leader, will lecture this evening in the Presbyterian church, on the "British House of Commons." A treat may be expected. Note the following opinion of the talented lecturer: "Mr. Davin's style is characterized by the warmth, brilliancy and humor of his nationality. He has a rich, full voice and a pleasing address. His verve and histrionic vivacity prevent even a lengthy lecture becoming in any way tedious. He delivered a highly interesting lecture before an audience of unusual culture and intelligence."—The National, Nov. 12, 1874.

—We are already crowded with job work.

—The new Methodist church at the Fort will be dedicated next Sunday.

—Rev. T. Lawson goes east on Monday night to the annual meeting of the Appropriation Committee of the Manitoba Methodist Conference to be held at Portage la Prairie next week.

—We are still working under difficulties in issuing THE PROGRESS, owing to having no exchanges to hand as yet, and not yet having become fully acquainted with all the sources for obtaining the local news. But in a few weeks we will get into better working order. In the meantime we ask our friends not to criticize us too severely.

EDGELEY.

—The most serious drawback of the settlement is the want of educational advantages for the young people.

—Mr. Thos. Gorrell is about to remove to Qu'Appelle. He is one of the partners with Mr. Johnson in the Qu'Appelle skating rink.

—Mr. Wm. Dunnlop has secured a residence in Qu'Appelle and will shortly remove there. We hope when the swallows return to see his genial face with us once more.

INDIAN HEAD.

—Indian Head council meets Dec. 1st.

—Mr. R. Railton starts on his tax collecting tour in a few days.

—The ratapayers would like the municipal council proceedings published in THE PROGRESS.

—The thief who stole some money recently from Mr. Shilson, of sec. 30, 18, 11, is said to have been captured in Toronto.

BALCONIE.

—We are pleased to know that Mr. Gordon Elliot, of this place, who has been suffering for nearly a year with a lame foot is able to be about.

—The Methodist and Church of England services are held here every two weeks alternately. The former is conducted by Mr. Dobbin, of the Law Department, Regina, and the latter by the Rev. Mr. Pelley, of Qu'Appelle.

—Lytell & Brothers are shipping cordwood for the Government service, Regina. The extensive bluffs to the north of us give us the promise of fuel for many years to come. Notwithstanding the plenty, the touching admonition may not be unnecessary to some, i.e., "woodman spare that tree."

—Sir John Lyster Kay, who owns the large Kay farm a mile south of the station, is spending the winter on his California estate. On the farm here they have between six and seven hundred acres ready for the spring crop. The farm has been further improved by extensive out buildings. Walter Blackburn is the manager.

—During the summer an extensive settlement of Germans have come in to the north of us. They were brought out from Roumania early in the spring by Mr. Cullen, who has selected for himself a homestead in the settlement. Unfortunately the Kiel rebellion drove some over to Uncle Sam's territory, but we learn now that the war is over, they are more than ready to return. These people were compelled to leave the land of their forefathers on account of religious persecutions, sanctioned and enforced by Russian despotism. Here they have found a land of civil and religious liberty. No official spies break in upon their devotions nor dare any lawless mob make them afraid. Let us hope like the Pilgrim Fathers of the New England States, they may become prosperous and happy. In religious belief they are generally Lutherans, Methodists and Baptists.

—The Qu'Appelle Progress from now till Jan. 1, 1887, for $1.00.

Adventures with Sharks.

"Yes, it was a close shave and I got off easy with this." The speaker, who was a Gulf coast pilot, held up an arm down to his splints. "I came up from Pensacola to take a schooner to Tampa, but I shall have to lie off for a couple of weeks or so. It happened in this way: I started for Fort Pickens in a light boat under sail about two weeks ago, and when we were half-way down the main what me speaks up and says: 'Captain, sharks is sorter thick.' And I'm dogged if they wasn't. Their fins was sticking water all around the boat, for ard, astern and on both sides, some going one way and some another, and I should reckon there was twenty or more of 'em. I didn't like the looks of 'em myself, but I says: 'they can't damage us in the dingy.' I hadn't no more in me, so I went out of my lips when, 'bim!' came a thirteen-foot shark clean out of the water. We both gave a jump to the windward, and the fish struck about a third in with a crash that almost filled us, thrashed for a minute, sending one of the cars flying into the air, and then swung its head around, and, as was reaching for the ship to give it a knock, the tail came ag'in my arm and broke it clean in two. In a minute more the shark was overboard, and we set there bailing and half scart to death."

"Accident? I couldn't say; most likely it was. Sharks often leave the water when they're chased, and it may not have seen the boat, but we didn't waste any time after that, I can tell you. The splash of the fish had collected them until the water was full of 'em, and I didn't feel safe until I was on the beach."

"Will they bite?" asked the listener. "Will a duck swim?" replied the pilot. "Why, my friend, in June or now, I'd just as soon swim a lake of red-hot pitch as to swim in from Pensacola to Fort Pickens. There are not so many accidents on record there, because people know the dangers and look out for them, but I know of at least a dozen cases. The last one happened last summer. A vessel came in port for a load of lumber, and the Captain's boy, quite a good-sized lad, in looking about the rigging, fell overboard. The men heard a scream and rushed to the rail, but the only sign they saw was a red cloud in the water. They got out the boat and finally recovered the body, but the head and limbs were missing. Another time a soldier tried to desert from the fort and was eaten by sharks. You see the brutes follow vessels in from off shore, and get in the habit of swallowing everything that comes along, and when a man goes overboard they rush for the splash. I've seen 'em moving around on the bottom like a drove of hogs. They generally swim slowly when not chased, but they can work up a tremendous race when they are chased, and I've seen one jump twenty feet into the air."

"To show you how hard they can bite," said the pilot, "I have seen one take a piece out of an ear. Another that was hauled alongside of a small boat took the outboard in its mouth and nearly crushed it to a jelly, leaving twenty or thirty teeth in the wood."

"So there you see a Spanish gun boat dropped in there, and the officers amused themselves shark fishing. They had got a circus. They would take a small dynamite cartridge, kinda piece of salt pork to it, and fix it to a float and wire, and send it two hundred feet astern. They would then throw a line, and they would fire by the wire, and the fish would try to swallow it. If one was wounded the others would for him and ate him up."—N. E. Shaw.

Wolf Teeth.

Wolf teeth are two small superfluous teeth which appear one on each side immediately in front of the first molar, or double tooth, on the upper jaw. Among horsemen there is a general impression that these teeth are injurious to the eyes, frequently causing blindness, unless removed. Veterinarians, however, do not coincide in this opinion, for if the belief were correct, all horses would go blind, as all have these superfluous teeth at some time of their lives, generally between the first and fifth year. So strong and widespread, however, is the belief in the blinding effect of these teeth, that whenever a horse is attacked with ophthalmia, the owner is likely to look for these teeth, and if found, they are thought to be the cause of the ailment and are roughly knocked out. In doing so the gums are generally bruised, causing considerable inflammation, which acting as a counter-irritant, attracts the inflammation from the eye, and, of course, the belief is confirmed that "wolf teeth" cause blindness."—Herald New York.

—There are now in this country over 500 horses able to trot a mile in less than 2:30, and 250 that can trot a mile in 2:20 or better.—Chicago Tribune.

—The Navajo Indians, of Arizona number 7,000. They occupy a reservation, over 1,000,000 sheep, 15,000 horses and 8,000 cattle, and live peacefully.—Denver Tribune.

—Charles White, of Thorndike, Me., has three yokes of oxen whose united weight is 12,200 pounds. One yoke measures eight feet four inches, and weighs 4,800 pounds.

—The great drainage system for the recovery of the Florida swamps now covers a tract 250 miles long and 50 miles broad. Nearly 1,000,000 acres of water goes to the sulphate and half to the State, are wholly reclaimed. Land that one year ago was two feet under water is now four feet above, and is being planted with sugarcane.—Chicago Journal.

ARABI IN EXILE.

A Visit to Egypt's Expatriated Premier.

Where a French Visitor Found Him, and How He Manages to Content Himself During His Forfeited Absence From His Native Land.

(Our Paris Matin.)

Arrived at Colombo we set out for Mount Aron to visit the retreat of Arabi. Mr. Henri Gigari, formerly an agent at Cairo of Rubbettino & Co., who is thoroughly acquainted with the Arabic language, consented to act as interpreter. While traveling through this country so singularly beautiful, I was almost tempted to envy the fate of those great Egyptian exiles. This sentiment grew stronger when our coachman pulled up in a delightful garden in which the luxuriant vegetation of Ceylon was displayed in all its splendor. Servants came to meet us, and, after having taken our cards, conducted us to the veranda, which was used as a reception room. Of Arabi there have been a great many descriptions. If I recall rightly, he has been described as a man without education, equally dull morally and physically. These I have also seen pictures representing him as a half negro, with thick lips and a low forehead. Nothing could be more untrue. This Arabi in whose presence we found ourselves is a man of tall stature and majestic carriage. His face, which is truly handsome, with an intelligent forehead, is framed in a long black beard, tinged with gray, which gives him the appearance of a patriarch. The eyes which, he converses and the affability of his manners denote in him the man of the world. If I did not fear to be guilty of a paradox in regard to the prisoner of the English, I would say that he is an accomplished gentleman.

Thanks to the good offices of an interpreter, the conversation did not languish. While smoking narghils and taking coffee a la Turque we spoke of Ceylon, of France, and, above all, of Egypt itself, the events in which the ex-dictator followed with an interest easily understood. "What does your excellency think of the war of the Mahdi and the result of it?"

"The campaign of the Mahdi," he replied, "must necessarily end in a reverse. The ardor of his troops will become worn out in the face of the reality of the results obtained. The opportunity to march upon Egypt is gone by and will not come again."

"Do you believe that Gordon will be able to overcome the difficulties which surround him?"

"I know Gordon," said Arabi. "He has extraordinary energy. I am convinced that, unless there is an accident, he will put down the insurrection. As for the English, I imagine that when they have pacified the country, if they are wise, they will allow it all the autonomy possible. Egypt enslaved would be of less service to them than Egypt administering her own affairs. She is too near Europe, too directly in contact with modern ideas, to permit of her being subjected to a state of vassalage like that of the principality of the rajahs. The movement of all nations toward total independence may be checked for a time, but sooner or later, it will begin again."

Here Arabi closed the conversation. We shall see how he spends his leisure hours. He lives like a private gentleman, and has with him his wives and children. Some of the latter have been sent to Cairo to pursue their studies. If material comfort can still amuse him, Arabi is certainly to be pitied. Ceylon ought not to make him regret Egypt, and his bitter hatred of exile appears to be very much more than a cake.

HUMORISTS.

—"Judge, I wish to be excused from serving on the jury; I'm deaf in one ear." "Oh, that don't matter," said the judge, "we only hear one side of the case at a time."

—"How many bees to a measure?" asks a correspondent. Your spelling shows that you should go to a farmer instead of a musician for information."—New York Journal.

—"Close the windows, Willie." "What for, papa? It's too warm in here now." "Do as you are told. Don't you see that Mary is going to sing."—Brooklyn Eagle.

—"A Cincinnati barber affirms that poor men rarely get bald, but the wealthier classes get bald sooner." "The professional and business men, lawyers, preachers, bankers, editors and reporters," said the barber.

—"Mr. Cobbs—" "Going to Europe this year?" "Mr. Burgess—" "Can't afford it. Our pipe leaked, and the plumber—" "Mr. Cobbs (interrupting).—" "Suff said. Mr. Cox, we can go to Coney Island, though."—N. E. Herald.

—"Sophia, sentimentally." "I dearly love to listen to the ticking of a clock. It seems to me that a clock has a language of its own." Mr. Smart—"Yes, Sophia, a clock has a language—you might say a dial-ret."

—"Hard lines," muttered the tramp when he tried to cut a clothes rope and found it was made of wire. "Here's something crooked about this," remarked the teacher, as he took a test pin away from a scholar.—N. E. Journal.

STRAYED

FROM the vicinity of Qu'Appelle Station is an entire red horse, white face, the whole four legs white, small white spot on one side, named J. H. He was last seen on a pack trail, and had no halter and rope when lost. Any person giving such information as will lead to his recovery will be liberally rewarded. Enquire at Edinboro & Beauchamp Station, Qu'Appelle & Aron.

The Nor-West Farmer

AND MINISTOTA MILLER,

(Wm. Clark, Editor.)

An illustrated journal, devoted to the development of the Agricultural, Grain, Milling and General interests of the Northwest, and to the advancement of Civilization.

Published Monthly at Winnipeg, Man.

Subscription Price, $1.00 per annum in advance. Agents wanted to canvass in every township in the Northwest to whom liberal commissions will be given.

Address, THE NOR-WEST FARMER, Winnipeg, Man.

We have made arrangements with the publishers of the above 32-page journal to club it with THE QU'APPELLE PROGRESS. The regular subscription price of the two is $2.00, but by the clubbing arrangement we are enabled to offer both for $1.75 for one year.
